JAPS ATTACK HAWAII BASES SUNDAY MORNING—WAR DECLARED

Two Maine men, Merton I. Staples of Biddeford and Theodore H. Jencius of Waterville, were among those lost in the surprise air attack of the Japanese on Honolulu, Pearl Harbor naval base, and Hickam Field Sunday morning.

Japanese air forces also attacked the Philippines, Hongkong and Singapore, and later succeeded in landing small forces on the Philippine shores.

Congress declared war on Japan with only one dissenting vote.

The Japanese reported sinking of two U. S. battleships Sunday, the West Virginia and Oklahoma, besides an aircraft carrier and mine sweeper, also damage to other naval vessels and capture of merchant ships.

Wednesday morning the British reported the loss of two of their capital ships, Prince of Wales and Repulse. The Japanese claimed they were destroyed by dive bombers.

Declarations of war against this country by Germany and Italy are announced today, and it is expected that Congress will declare war against these nations at once.

Mainente Pupils Play on Weekly Radio Broadcast

Much interest is shown here in the activities of the Mainente Musicale—a program broadcast weekly on Sunday evenings at 8:45 o'clock, from station WCOU, Lewiston—in that it gives to music students the opportunity of broadcast technique and experience and presentation of fine music. Next Sunday will be the 40th uninterrupted weekly presentation of this program. Those of this vicinity having participated in this program are Masters Francis Bean, Dexter Stowell and Roy Lurvey.

Master Francis Bean, 13 year old pianist of Bryant Pond, will broadcast at the usual time Sunday, playing Weber's piano composition, "Invitation to the Dance." This is one of the most beautiful concert waltzes in the entire literature of music, and, in fact, is one of the finest romantic-descriptive examples extant. This will be Master Bean's second appearance at this station.

On Nov. 2 Master Dexter Stowell, also of Bryant Pond, successfully broadcast from this station interesting piano compositions of Schubert, Mendelssohn and other composers.

Master Roy Lurvey, 12 year old clarinetist of Locke Mills, who for several times has appeared on this program, due to his fine playing of Weber's Concertino has been invited to play again. This he will do in a short time, in the playing of the famous Fantasia on the opera Rigoletto by Verdi-Bassi.

THE AMERICAN'S CREED

I believe in the United States of America, as a government of the people, by the people, for the people, whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and freedom.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

Gould Quintet Meets Alumni Friday

The Gould Academy quintet will open its 1941-42 schedule on Friday when they meet an exceptionally strong Alumni aggregation composed of many former star players. There will be two games opening with the Gould Second Team meeting the Alumni reserves at 7:15, while the main event will start at 8:30.

The second team lineup for the Alumni will be Lowe and Billings, forwards; Irving Brown, center; and Howe and Peabody, guards. The starters for the school boy reserves will probably be Grover and Townsend forwards; McInnis, center; and Wright and Wing, guards.

For the main event the Alumni have two fine strong teams to send against the hopefuls of Gould Academy. The starting lineup will put Gould's last year's star guests, Hutchins and Clough, in the back court to take care of the Academy forwards. Palmer, elongated center, of the teams of 1938 and '39 will be in there at the pivot post, while Wilson Bartlett and Charlie Smith, both clever ball handlers and good basket tossers, will fill the forward posts.

The second lineup features two sharp shooters, Don Stanley and Frank Littlehale, as forwards; Gard Smith at center, and the back court men will be Hinkley and Whitman.

Against these former luminaries Coach Anderson will start the veteran Billy Robertson and Charles St. Thomas in the forward positions. Clark Richmond will start at center and another veteran, Nick Amato, will team with, probably, Berry or Coolidge at the guard posts.

This Gould-Alumni encounter will be the first athletic engagement held in the new Field House. A large crowd is expected for this opening game on one of the finest courts in Maine. The time is 7:15 and admission will be 30c and 15c which includes the tax.

The children of the Congregational Sunday School are requested to be present at the Sunday School hour Dec. 14 as parts are to be assigned for the Christmas pageant. If unable to attend please notify Mrs. Arthur Dudley, superintendent.

GAS TAX LAW VOTED DOWN

The vote in the State yesterday on the referendum of the Holman Bill which involved the addition of half cent gasoline tax, defeated the measure by about 4 to 1. The Bethel vote was 66 no, 31 yes.

HOME GUARD HAS UNIFORM—NEEDS MORE MEMBERS AS POSSIBILITY OF CALL GROWS

The Bethel American Legion Brigade (Home Guard) is now clothed in new uniforms at its Monday and Thursday evening drill meetings which adds much to the men's appearance. It is hoped that arrangements can be completed soon for the use of a hall for drill meetings as the space in the hose house has always been too small, and the streets in December are not so good for this purpose.

The purpose of a local Home Guard unit becomes more evident with the entry of this nation into active warfare. The Bethel company, with less than three months training of two evenings a week, naturally is not fitted for many of the necessary duties that may be expected, but during this time, in spite of poor facilities a good start has been made.

It now becomes of vital importance that every enrolled member should attend every drill meeting. It is also desirable that a larger number of men join the group. For the older men it is an opportunity to become fitted for real service in time of emergency. For the younger men it is the ideal way of becoming acquainted with the rudiments of military drill, which it is almost certain that they will be required to learn sooner or later. The younger men who have dependents and thus are unlikely to be called for military service are especially needed here.

It should be understood however that there is no pay for this service and the members of the Home Guard do have some expense in maintaining membership. Attendance at drill is expected and the record of the members is very good. Those joining must expect to reconstruct their program of amusement or recreation to conform to the usual hours of drill.

For those who can't take it in a military way there are many other defense projects which can use their services. But the average men, who can pass a simple physical examination, will find useful service in great variety in the Home Guard.

BETHEL P. T. A. HAS OVER 130 MEMBERS

A meeting of the Parent Teacher Association was held at the Grammar School building Monday evening. The membership committee reported over 130 members as the result of the recent drive. Gould Alumni to Have Jamboree, Mass. Branch

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Gould Academy Alumni Association held Wednesday evening, it was unanimously voted to start organizing a Massachusetts Association to be centered in Greater Boston. Alumni members in or near this area will be approached to find what their reaction to such a suggestion would be. This organization will be a sub-committee to work with the present executive committee. It is hoped that such a plan will increase the active interest and membership of the Association.

Plans are now under way for an Alumni Jamboree an informal dance, to be held at the William Bingham Gymnasium on Friday, Dec. 20, at 8 p. m. A varied program is being planned, which will include square dances and old-fashioned waltzes.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

INFORMAL PORTRAITS

Informal portraits are easily taken indoors. All you need are a few inexpensive accessories for many evenings of pleasure during the winter months.

TAKEN indoors or out, the most important part of any snapshot portrait is a good likeness. The very word "portrait" means a likeness, but it also suggests a portrayal which is natural and shows something of the person's character and individuality, as well as the subject's features.

To obtain such personality studies indoors, you must do two things. First, arrange your flood lamps and camera in advance, so that you can snap a picture quickly and without a lot of fuss and tinkering. Second, put your subject at ease.

For example, glance at the picture above. The photo lights were set up at the side of the chair while Jane was absorbed in a book. When everything was in readiness, her attention was attracted for a moment; she smiled as she looked at the camera—and the shutter was released. It is this type of shooting that enables you to get spontaneous, natural expressions.

Don't depend upon one shot, of course. Usually one set-up is worth a number of pictures showing various expressions and poses. It's all right to make suggestions to your subject for different poses—perhaps for a turn of the head or a change of expression—but don't insist too much on minor details. Try to get your pictures quickly, so that you can avoid "posey" expressions.

Now, a word about indoor lighting. The placing of your lights must not be extreme, for you don't want odd lighting effects in informal portraiture. A basic lighting plan involving two amateur flood lamps—a No. 1 and a No. 2—will be found satisfactory for a wide variety of pictures. Place the No. 1 light near the camera and the No. 2 light off to the side and a little higher. They should both be at the same distance from the subject. This produces a nicely balanced lighting with no extreme or harsh shadows. With the lamps just described, used in inexpensive cardboard reflectors, you can easily take snapshots, even with a box camera loaded with high speed film.

Try some informal portraits tonight. They're easy to make, and good indoor shots increase the appeal and variety of your album.

THAT CENT

Among many organizations we find the custom of taking a penny collection. It is not to be despised, for the reason that by it every penny says for some one: "I am present." On the other hand the times have outgrown it. It started I fancy in our early Sunday school days, when each child was asked to help a little and form a worthy habit by bringing what each child could give, a penny.

The value of a penny is not what it used to be and yet the custom has spread to numerous organizations where the members ease their conscience by taking part in a penny collection for causes important enough to demand generous support. Try the penny somewhere else: the candy counter, ice cream parlor, movie, etc. You will find yourself paying 25c, 50c, $1.00 or more for many things of little real value and then pay one cent or nothing, for causes that are doing a world of good.

It is beautiful to see the happy, trustful little child trotting off to Sunday school with a penny clasped tightly in one hand and in the other oftentimes something for the beloved teacher.

For the other people let the penny grow. Think of the value of the thing you are supporting and don't insult it with a penny. Cut out the penny collections. Let them be nickel or dime collections. Notice the result. Try it. It won't hurt. F. E. RUSSELL.

GOULD ACADEMY . . . UPTON

Wednesday night the first 10 men of the boys' basketball squad will meet some members of the Alumni for their first real scrimmage. This is not an official game and is played merely for the purpose of giving the Alumni practice for their game next Friday.

One of the most unique classes which are now being held at Gould Academy is a class in music appreciation for parents of students and friends of the school. These classes meet on Thursday night and a small charge is made. The income from this class will be used to pay necessary expenses and to foster music and its appreciation in the grades in the town. At the present time there are 20 to 25 adults enrolled.

Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock the third program of the Royal attractions will be presented at the school assembly hall, featuring Bernice Henderson, America's foremost banjoist and whistler, who will be assisted by her brother Jack who writes many of the compositions and arrangements. Clever stories, impersonations, and readings will be portrayed. The program itself consists of concerts and open selections along with popular melodies and modern interpretations. These remarkable artists have appeared at many clubs and social events, each time making a very fine impression. The music world, the press, and the public have all recognized their exceptional talents.

The following holders of concert tickets of Gould Academy made their second trip to Portland Tuesday night in order to hear the National Symphony Orchestra: Oliver McEon, Frances Holmes, Harriette Holmes, Malcolm Brown, Eva Lawry, Patricia Gould, Mary Lou Hamilton, Gretchen Brooks, Marla Smith, Mava Jones, Betty Runyon, Claire Reid, Fremont Ireland, Gladys Neuwanger, Jane Chesley, Whipple Abbe, Barbara Linnitt, Robert Greenleaf, Herbertine Norton, Hope Bean, Miss Soule, Miss Griggs, and Mr. and Mrs. Ireland.

Tuesday morning the whole school assembly saw a picture furnished by the Chicago Tribune on their sports program. It was named the "American Way." It is a plea for everyone to get into some form of athletics and it showed the many projects sponsored by this paper and how it affected the American youth.

Wednesday morning the school was shown a guidance picture on "How to Choose a Vocation." This film was furnished us by the Boston University Film Service from their special guidance library.

Plans are going forward for a Christmas Concert, under the direction of Miss Ann Griggs, which will be given at the Congregational Church on Sunday, Dec. 14, at 4:30 p. m. This will be a Candlelight Service held by the Music Clubs of Gould Academy. The candleabra has been made by the Manual Arts Department and a delightful program has been arranged.

The Christmas story will be read by Miss Mary Soule.

The Glee Clubs will sing many of the beautiful old carols as well as several less familiar ones. Mrs. Elwood Ireland will serve as organist.

The Orchestra will play a group of numbers from "The Messiah." Everyone in the community is most cordially invited to attend this Christmas Vesper Service.

THIS WEEK IN DEFENSE

Summarizing Information on the Important Developments of the Week Made Available by Official Sources through and including Friday

Secretary of State Hull told his press conference Japan's policies are based on force in every way—politically, economically, socially, and morally in contrast to the U. S. view of settling disputes by peaceful means based on law, justice and morals. Mr. Hull said diplomatic conversations with Japanese envoys have not yet reached a point where actual negotiations toward a peaceful settlement of Far Eastern differences could be undertaken.

President Roosevelt formally asked the Japanese Government why it has sent land, air and sea forces to Indo-China in far greater numbers than originally agreed upon with the Vichy Government of France. The Japanese denied they have violated their agreement.

Assistant Navy Secretary Bard, speaking in Norfolk, Virginia, said: "At present the Pacific is like a tinder box. The Navy is thoroughly prepared to face the fact that—in the regrettable event of trouble in the Pacific that trouble will not be a minor one."

Aid to Britain, Turkey

The White House announced Lend-Lease Administrator Stettinius had been instructed "to see that the defense needs of the Government of Turkey were filled as fast as possible." The Navy announced two additional British warships are undergoing repairs in U. S. ports. The U. S. Petroleum Coordinator announced 28 oil tankers have been released by the British and returned to their American owners.

Navy Progress

Navy Secretary Knox told his press conference the Navy's shipbuilding program "is continuing to bear all projected schedules." Since January 1, 1941, Mr. Knox said, the Navy has ordered 5,334 vessels at a total cost of $7,353,000,000 and nearly one billion dollars has been allocated for expanding shipbuilding facilities. During November, the Secretary said, 33 combat ships were launched, keels laid for 62 more and five new ships including the 33,000-ton dreadnought Indiana joined the fleet.

Merchant Shipbuilding

The Maritime Commission announced its goal of "one ship a day" will be attained this month and that plan are under way to increase the program to two ships a day by next summer. Thirty vessels are scheduled for launching in December 30 in January and 40 in February, the Commission said. Primary objective is approximately 1,000 ships the Commission director said and the end is not yet.

The Labor Department estimated 300,000 more workers will be needed for ship construction by this time next year. The Maritime Commission estimated the total number of seamen will have to be doubled by the end of 1942.

New Defense Appropriations

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill appropriating $8,243,000,000 to expand the Army immediately to 2,000,000 men, mainly to be mobilized Philippine Army, expand manufacturing facilities for critical weapons, to double total previously scheduled production and vastly increase the supply of these weapons. To raise the number of aircraft available for accumulating military use, the Army Air Corps is authorized to construct large merchant vessels to assist in the war effort. The bill would bring the total outlay for defense since the fall of France to $77,000,000,000.

Editorial Digest

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill which would provide for the mobilization of defense labor. It would bring all strikes for occupational or jurisdictional reasons and outlaw all strikes that have not been called by a majority of the workers through a secret ballot approved by the Government. The bill would also require labor unions to register with the Federal and State governments the names of officials and number of members and the amount of dues and fees charged, empower the chairman of the National Defense

Mediation Board to order a 60-day cooling-off period; and deprive any union of its benefits under the Wagner Act if "knowingly or negligently" it allowed a Communist, a member of the German-American Bund or a person convicted of a felony to hold union office.

Chairman Wayne Morse of the President's special fact-finding board announced settlement of the wage dispute between railway management and labor which had threatened a nation-wide railroad strike December 7. The agreement, effective until the end of 1942, increased the wages of 350,000 operating employees by 76 cents a day and the wages of 805,000 non-operating personnel by 10 cents an hour.

Subcontracting and Small Business

The House created a special seven-man committee of Representatives to determine if: (1) the potentialities of small business to handle defense have fully developed; (2) adequate attention has been given the needs of small business engaged in non-defense work; (3) small business is being fairly treated in allocation of materials. Director Odum of the OPM Contract Distribution Division, speaking in New York, said 70 percent of U. S. manufacturing establishments employ 20 people or less. He said these 133,300 small plants are the hardest to find, the most difficult to connect to defense work, and the hardest to connect back later to civilian economy.

Materials and Priorities

The OPM asked retailers and the general public to make a special effort to economize in the use of gift boxes, tissue and wrapping paper and similar materials during the Christmas season. OPM issued an order curtailing production of household mechanical refrigerators during January and February from 30 to 53 percent, depending on the size of the company. OPM also restricting the use of lead and tin foil in packaging cigarettes, chewing gum, and similar items, and extended blanket priorities to materials for the blind.

Inflation Control

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill establishing a Price Control Administration under the direction of a Price Administrator and a five-man Board of Review authorized to modify or set aside any price order of the Administrator. The bill would empower the Price Administrator to impose price ceilings on all commodities and on rents in defense areas. It would place a floor under fishery commodity prices so that price ceilings could not be below the 1941 average or the average cost of production. It would also provide no ceiling shall be established for agricultural products below (1) 110 percent of parity; (2) the price prevailing on October 1; (3) or the average price during the period July 1, 1919 to June 30, 1929. The bill provides for enforcement of the Act through the courts by fines of not more than $5,000 and imprisonment for not more than two years.

Prices

The Department of Agriculture issued a statement that farmers are bringing to a close their best year since 1920, with production, prices and incomes at high levels. The Department said its index of farm prices stands at 135 percent of the August 1909-July 1914 average or 30 points above a year ago. The Department of Labor announced its index of wholesale prices reached an 11-year peak and stood at 123 of the 1926 level.

Price Administrator Henderson asked 27 rubber footwear manufacturers to hold prices where they are, began an investigation of 12 and 24 percent increases in prices of rubber used for retreading automobiles. Reached agreement with manufacturers to stabilize prices of Western pine doors and door and window frames, set a ceiling for asphalt and tarred roofing products and won agreements of manufacturers to hold prices of six nationally-advertized brands of sleeping mattresses to $29.50.

Maubeflex Christmas

by ANNE MARY LAWLER

SYNOPSIS

Ma Shennon's doctor has warned her that this is her last Christmas. She is unwilling to inform her children, now pursuing careers in other cities, for fear the news will disturb them. However, she plans a last family reunion and invites each of her four children home to Mountain Creek for the holidays. In New York Lydia, secretary-companion to a wealthy invalid and in love with her employer's husband, is afraid to leave the man she loves to the merces of her rival, Margot Haines. In Chicago, Kenneth, successful doctor, permits his beautiful and spoiled wife to dissuade him from making the trip. In Baltimore, Robert, penniless writer, has his own plans for the holidays, plans which may make the publication of his book possible.

Installment 3

Dan, as usual, had written a long and rambling letter. All the town gossip was listed. "Old Lady Gilden died. Ninety-two she was. She had a big funeral and the Gazette ran a swell editorial on the front page. And Hannah Cantwell finally married that traveling man she's been sniping for these last ten years. Mom is going to miss handling their letters. It used to give her something to talk about for days. Greg Henderson and Molly have busted up again. She's talking about a divorce, but nobody takes it seriously. Mountain Creek's idea of marriage is to stick together and fight it out. And speaking of marriage, if you happen to get tired of Hollywood one of these days, you still have that option on me."

Sally mopped her eyes, shamefacedly, like a child, on the back of her hand. Odd that Dan's casually affectionate letter could move her so deeply, could pierce her with such loneliness and discontent.

She read her mother's letter wistfully. It would be nice to go home for Christmas, she thought, suddenly weary of Hollywood's perpetual tropic charm. Christmas in Mountain Creek would be white, she remembered. The pine needles would be glazed with ice. There would be skating on Hallam Lake, bobsled—

The desk clerk shrilled across the lobby. "Phone for you, Miss Shannon."

It was a man's voice. "Sally Shannon? This is Mort Meyers."

"Yes, Mr. Meyers?" Mort Meyers, of Super Pictures.

"We're starting work on 'Small Town' next week. There might be a bit for you there. Not just ordinary extra stuff. If you'll drop around tomorrow—"

Breathlessly, "Oh, yes, Mr. Meyers!"

A voice behind her rasped the silence with steel-edged accents. "Got a call, kid?"

It was Morna Dunlap, another embryo box-office attraction. Sally nodded with rapture. "That was Mort Meyers," she bubbled. "They're testing for 'Small Town' and he thinks there might be a bit for me."

Morna's smile chilled. "Watch that bird," she cautioned.

Sally became immediately defensive. "It was wonderful of him to remember and call me."

"Now look here, kid," Morna's sharp face was anxious. "It's none of my business, and therefore I can discuss it largely. That guy's a wolf. He cats little girls up. Especially little girls from hick towns. If he's got a bit for you, there'll be plenty of twine attached."

The next day Sally kept remembering Morna's vehement tirade. "Look here," he was saying persuasively, "a guy like me could do a lot for a little gal like you—"

But what were Morna's words—plenty of twine attached?"

"What are you doing this week-end?" Before she could reply he went on: "Maybe we could take a little drive through the country. We could have dinner at the Prairie Dog and maybe dance later on?"

She heard herself saying, "Why, that'd be lovely."

"Pity we haven't time to motor to Palm Springs. But maybe over Christmas—ever been to Palm Springs?"

She turned upon him a smile dazzling in its radiance. "I've never been to Palm Springs," she admitted. "But I'd love to go—some-time."

"Would Christmas do?" Sally did not look at his mouth.

"Christmas," she said calmly, "would be delightful."

Sally did not answer her letters that night. She could not face her mother or Dan, even by so remote a medium as note-paper. She tossed in restless dreams where a man with slippery eyes was inviting her home to Mountain Creek for Christmas and a tall boy with freckles was offering her the best ingenu part of the season. And all she could say in reply was, "Maybe next Christmas—"

"And," said Ma Shannon firmly, "I want a Star of Bethlehem. For the top of the tree."

Dan Davis fished into a large box of electrical ornaments.

"Looks like this is going to be a big Christmas."

"Biggest in my life," said Ma proudly. "Just the way it used to be when the Big Doc was alive. All the youngsters home—turkey with chestnut filling, sweet potatoes and corn and mashed potatoes and gajet gravy and hot mince pie with hard sauce. A Christmas tree with candy canes and tinsel and popcorn and a star."

Ma's eyes grew moist and she blundered into her handbag to cover her aching tenderness.

"Hey! You're forgetting to consult in the window and the door left unlatched!"

"I never locked my door on Christmas Eve, yet," Ma said scornfully. "And I always had a couple of candles burning in the window. In case—well—just in case—"

"My grandmother was Irish," Dan said soberly, "and she always did that. Said it was to welcome the Christ Child."

"It's more than that," Ma snapped. "It's to welcome anybody that's got no place to go on Christmas Eve. Many's the night the Big Doc and me put up tramps for Christmas Eve. There's still lots of people can't find room at the inn."

Dan said he'd cut a Christmas tree for her in the next few days.

"You're a good boy, Danny," Ma reached up and ruffled the untidy sandy hair.

"I'd make a good son-in-law," he grinned shamelessly.

"If only Sally had the sense she was born with," Ma's mouth was grim. "What does she expect to find in Hollywood that she won't find here in Mountain Creek—except money, of course?"

Dan's eagerness excused Sally. "She's so pretty, Ma," he said wistfully. "And she's always wanted to be an actress, ever since she got that swell write-up for being in the high school play."

"We've got to be patient with Sally," said Ma. "She's like her father. She gets notions and she's got to find her way out of them. One of these days she'll get good and tired of Hollywood, of hanging on and being lonesome and away from home."

"I wrote to her," Dan smiled quietly, "about coming home for Christmas, I mean. I thought maybe—maybe this time she wouldn't go back again if I—if I—"

"Maybe she won't," Ma's tones were hopeful. "Sally's not like Lydia, you know. Lydia's smart and sharp and, well, a little hard. Kenneth is like that, too. But Robert, he was always a frightened little boy. And Sally—Sally's the same. They're babies. They're weaker than the others. We have to be patient with weak people."

Ma Shannon surveyed her shabby house with pardonable pride. It throbbed with the spirit of Christmas.

Every curtain had been washed, ironed and rehung at windows that sparkled like crystal. Ma had raced her grudging heart in a superhuman effort to make the little house as lovely and as welcoming as it could be.

Dan was coming to trim the Christmas tree and to help move some of the heavy furniture upstairs. Each of the rooms would be as the children remembered it.

Ma had all her Christmas presents wrapped and ready. She had thought with great care on the problem of dividing her meager little treasures among her four children.

The mahogany highboy for Kenneth, of course. Kenneth knew all about antiques and periods and designers. So the highboy stood in his mother's room, gaudily ribboned and tagged.

The family silver for Lydia, what there was left of it; the heavy water pitcher, the graceful bread tray, the quaint old butter dish, all wrapped in bright tissue to be placed under the tree.

His father's beloved library for Robert, in whom the printed word was a song sweeter than the angels sing. Many treasured old favorites and a few really good first editions.

The old-fashioned quilt, of course, for Sally. And some chipped china, fragile and transparent. And the little willow rocker she had always loved. Ma added, as an afterthought, the faded old sampler of the Lord's Prayer in its dull maple frame.

Where could Dan be? Ma glared at the hoarse-voiced old clock and fretted with impatience.

Up the steep hill below the house floated the sound of a motor in dire distress. Headless of her pounding heart, Ma rushed to the door. If Dan was late because he had brought someone up from town—

The engine coughed pitifully, wheezed to a stop and subsided with strange clankings and grunts. But Dan was alone.

Dan piled package after package on the scrubbed kitchen table.

"From Mom, and Aunt Millie, and the butcher, and some of the folks down town. And these"—pointing to two bulky manila-swathed boxes—"these came in the mail."

"New York and Baltimore," mused Ma. "I guess maybe Lydia and Robert didn't want to be bothered carting them here by train."

Dan's face was warden as he tossed three letters on the table. "These came in, too." He turned away awkwardly.

Ma's lips thinned to a sharp blue line. One by one she ripped open the envelopes. Then her wide, pale-eyed eyes turned to Dan.

"They can't make it," she said flatly. "Lydia, Robert, Kenneth. Not this Christmas, anyway. They say," she laughed sharply, an ugly, merciless laugh, "they say maybe next Christmas. But Danny," her voice shrilled suddenly, "maybe next Christmas might be too late."

"There's always Sally," Dan reminded.

Ma beamed through hurt tears. "Why, of course," she said. "There's always Sally!"

Christmas Eve had finally come to Mountain Creek, not in the bright unseasonable guise that had adorned December for the last few weeks, but unexpectedly chill. A discouraged sun intermittently pried through heavy clouds, and the air was still with that leaden silence that walks before a storm.

"Going to have a white Christmas after all," Ma Shannon confided to the Big Doc's picture hanging on the wall. Ma found herself talking to that picture a lot these lonely days.

The picture returned a wise, understanding stare.

Ma took the three worn letters from her apron pocket and reread them for the hundredth time.

"They'd all be home for Christmas," she explained once more to her husband's photograph, "only, well, you see how things are. Lydia says her boss won't let her go on people to the house for the holidays. His wife's an invalid, not expected to last long, either. So Lydia's got to take care of things."

Ma was pathetically anxious that the Doc understand. "He depends on Lydia a lot, you know." Ma brushed off a tear. "We all get lonely at Christmas, don't we? And we can't expect Lydia to drop a good job like that just to run home for a few days."

"And Kenneth's tied up at that clinic. We all have to pay for success one way or another. It's a member here we couldn't go on a honeymoon to Europe. Mrs. Butler was going to have a baby and you were afraid to leave her? That's the way it is with doctors, I guess. Though it would have been nice to have Kenneth home, and the baby, too. She's a sweet little thing. Kid spoiled, of course, but I guess all only children get spoiled. I don't like Ken's wife much. She's sort of standoffish and snobby, but that's because they have so much money. And they stick together."

Ma Shannon surveyed her shabby house with pardonable pride. It throbbed with the spirit of Christmas.

Every curtain had been washed, ironed and rehung at windows that sparkled like crystal. Ma had raced her grudging heart in a superhuman effort to make the little house as lovely and as welcoming as it could be.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes fail in their work - do not act as Nature intended - fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be aching back, puffiness, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Lee Doan's Pills, Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nationwide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

PATRONS SERVE ON PLAY
JURY AT GOULD GYM

Something new in theatricals will be the feature of the evening when the Junior Class of Gould Academy presents "Night of January 16th" in the William Bingham Gymnasium on Thursday evening, Dec. 18. There have been plays before with vague endings, but this is the first one in which the audience takes an integral part in its development and conclusion. With Maxine Flanders, who portrays the leading part, on trial, the jury selected from the audience is given the problem of deciding her guilt or innocence.

As they get their reserved seats at Besserman's Drug Store, patrons may leave their names as candidates for jury duty. On the evening of the performance, those names are given to the clerk of the court, and from this number the twelve that are drawn by lot are selected to serve. One by one they step up on the platform and take their places in the jury box, just as they would in a legitimate court trial, are sworn in, and listen to the testimony. Both men and women are eligible.

Each act of the play represents one day of the trial. Just before the ending of the act the jury retires for the last time to render a verdict.

Be sure to be on hand on Dec. 18. You may be one of the people who help to decide whether or not Karen Andre is guilty or not guilty of the murder of Bjorn Faulkner.
